

Yes, some HU-mans who, because their skin is darker, were and are horrifically screwed by this system. That should be rectified. But not by these clever folk.

I've never met a white man and I've never met a black man. I don't know what the hell that is. I've met a HU-man. Some lighter skinned and some darker skinned. Yes, some HU-mans who, because their skin is darker, were and are horrifically screwed by this system. That should be rectified.

But now, clever people, darker or lighter, want to exploit them by having them all think alike. In their unified mentality, like worker ants, they lose their individuality and thus lose what they wanted if they were united. It's as insulting for them to be played, like they were in the media, when a 'lighter race played upon their collective thought.' When a person thinks individually not like one of a herd, then that person has illuminated and thus admired and thus those like that person are too __
